FR DAVID'S GOSPEL REFLECTIONS

Seventh Sunday of Easter – C: Today's Gospel urges us to work for greater unity. The theme of unity is best expressed in Jesus's prayer near the end of John 17. Often called Jesus's high priestly prayer, it is the Son of God's prayer on his behalf and on behalf of his disciples and those who become disciples through them. This unity is not first and foremost a social or organizational unity. Rather, it is a unity "from above," a theological unity in the highest sense. The unity is rooted in the unity between God the Father and Jesus the Son. Whatever social or organizational unity there may be among Christians is the result of the prior theological unity that exists among the persons of the Trinity and us; it has been made possible through the incarnation and resurrection of Jesus. Our unity in Christ stems from the risen Jesus who brings together peoples from many lands and languages. Those who observe this unity in Christ should be led to inquire about it. Unity in Christ is an important and effective means by which Christian faith may be spread. Therefore working for greater unity among Christians is an essential part of the Christian mission. And yet we realise how difficult it is to achieve unity. We experience disunity in our families, churches, cities, nation and world. And yet we cannot be satisfied with disunity or grow accustomed to it. We have a mandate from Jesus to work so that all may be one.

Pentecost – C: In Greek "Pentecost" means "fifty." In the Jewish calendar Pentecost is fifty days after Passover. In the Christian calendar it is fifty days after Easter. It marks the end of the Easter season. It celebrates the coming of the Holy Spirit on the first disciples of Jesus gathered in Jerusalem. It is sometimes described as the birthday of the church. The scripture readings for the day are rich in imagery and theology. However, one theme that runs through them all may be missed. It is the insistence that the gift of the Holy Spirit is something to be shared with others. Luke's account of the descent of the Holy Spirit upon Jesus's apostles and other disciples (including Mary) in Acts 2 has shaped the imagination of Christians about Pentecost for many centuries. In both Hebrew and Greek the word for "wind" (ruach and pneuma) is the same word for "spirit." The references to wind and fire in the narrative echo John the Baptist's prophecy about the "more powerful" one coming with a baptism of the "Holy Spirit" and fire (see Luke 3:16). What may get overlooked is that the disciples immediately devote themselves to sharing the good news about Jesus with pilgrims who had come to Jerusalem to celebrate Pentecost. The first disciples recognized that the gift of the Holy Spirit was not something to be hidden away and enjoyed privately. Rather it moves its recipients into action and inspires them to share it with others. The Gospel passage highlights the power of the Holy Spirit. The Spirit will provide the power by which the movement begun by Jesus can continue. Moreover, the gift of the Spirit expresses itself in mission. Throughout John's Gospel, Jesus is described as the one sent by God. Now the risen Jesus urges his disciples to carry on his mission: "As the Father sent me, so am I sending you." The gift of the Spirit will enable them (and us) to fulfil that commission.
